S. Knapp of South Paris and J. H. Knapp of Norway, and one sister, Mrs. Julian Brown of Norway. The flowers were brought to South Paris and interment took place at Pine Grove cemetery in the family lot.

Stock Proved Worthless. Dr. C. Howard Merritt, a former dentist of Auburn, has recently been convicted by a jury in Oakland, Cal., for attempting to mislead the public as to the existence of oil on the land of the Halvick Oil Co. by means of forming prospectus. During the past two years considerable stock has been sold in Norway and vicinity and it is found to be worthless.

In the trial it showed that the land of this company in Leno County, North Carolina, was being used for grazing purposes, and then exploited for oil land. It was found after investigation that there were no indications of oil to warrant in the "slightest degree the assumption of merit" in his advertisement. Merritt was sentenced to six months in prison in the Alameda County jail and to pay a fine of $1000. The sentence was made lighter than it would have been had it not been his first offence. The conviction is the first under a new statute making it a felony to circulate misleading advertising matter.

You might just as well use a road machine and it would be better too." "That's all you know about it," said Frank Eastman, the stage driver. Last Basket Ball Game of Season.

The largest crowd yet to turn out for the basket ball game was at the Opera House, Wednesday evening to witness the last game of the season, which was between the Norway Regulars and the Bridgton Academy Basket ball team.

The game was not a particularly scientific one but as the score was kept close, it made it more interesting. The game was more or less ruff throughout. The players received hearty applause at each good play. The Bridgton team is a heavy team while that of Norway is somewhat lighter. The final score was 21 to 13 in favor of the Bridgton team.

No Reason for It.

When Norway Citizens Show the Certain Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of diabetes of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Norway citizen says:

George H. Baswell, Marston St., Norway, Me., says: "About six months ago my kidneys became disordered and I began to suffer from dull pains across the small of my back. A languid feeling came over me, and I was unable to rest well. I also noticed that the kidney secretions were too frequent in passage, although the flow was scanty. My body often bloated and I was also troubled by dull headaches. I read that Doan's Kidney Pills had rid other persons of similar troubles and deciding to try them, I procured a box from Stone's Drug Store. They cured me and I am free from kidney complaint at the present time." 10-17

Henry Cook and the Indians.

It was a cold morning in March. Henry Cook's mother and father were getting ready to go to the village, six miles from their home. Henry was twelve years old. He was going to stay at home and keep house while they were gone. Mr. and Mrs. Cook started about seven o'clock in the morning. Henry said good-by and watched them until they were out of sight.

He put his gun up in a corner and went to eat his breakfast. After he had eaten, he read a little while and was going to put some wood in the stove when he heard a noise, and on looking out of the window he saw three Indians creeping up toward the house. He got his gun and fired at one of them and killed him.

The other two sprang up to the door but he barred the inside. By this time Henry had reloaded his gun and was ready again. When the Indians found that they could not get in, they tried to set the house on fire. Henry saw this and shot the Indian and saw the fire as a result. When the Indian that was alive saw what had happened he turned and ran into the woods.

When Henry's father and mother came home that night and heard all about it, they said that he was a brave boy, but that they would never leave him alone again.

The New Spring Suit.

"The tailored suit comes first when we begin to think and plan for our spring wardrobe," says Grace Margaret Gould in Women's Home Companion for March. "It is the first of the new season to the air. Just how to make it or have it made is then a most important question. If your tailored suit does not show the new out this spring, there is no use spending a good deal of money for it. It will be out of date, and it will not conform to the straight line slim figure and the chief point of newness is the cut."

"The coats are straight and short. They are fitted across the shoulders, fit close to the body and semi-fitting only in the waist. There is surely a blessing hidden away in this new cut. Does it not mean that women will no longer insist on wearing a corset entirely too small? And will it not end, if we are fortunate enough to have the fashion last, in women being able and glad to learn to breathe as they should."

"The fashionable coat length is just to the point of the hip, though the length carries from nineteen to twenty-six inches. In the spring tailored suit, the coat and skirt must match perfectly. If the coat, for instance, is cut with a panel back and front, the skirt must show precisely the same lines—that is, the panel must appear at the back and front. In the spring tailored suit, the coat or skirt must meet these lines precisely, for the effect to be obtained is really a princess or a one piece suit."

"The mannish tailored suit for morning and general everyday wear will be more in vogue than ever. Of course this type of suit is never trimmed, but this spring a great variety of form of diagonal seams will be used which give clever trimming suggestions. The skirt will continue to be narrow and short—many will escape the ground from three to five inches. The regulation coat sleeve is used in these suits, though for the dressier tailor makes the sleeve will often be cut in one with the body of the coat."

EAST FRYEBURG.
Jesse Brown and Dana Libby have gone to Boston, Mass.
Mrs. H. W. Lord and son, Milton, visited relatives at West Lovell, Thurs day and Friday.
Our school has begun with Elsie Chase of Seaboard as teacher. She boards at O. B. Lord's.
Austin Warren, who has been at Alphonso Hilton's all winter, has returned to his home here. Mrs. Trimback of Norway is keeping house for him.

In the state of Vermont Agricultural Report under the head of "Caneberries" by A. F. Hawes, State Forester, he states under the Canifers, "Red or Norway Pine." "This has about the same natural range east and west as the white pine, but only grows in the white pine country." It derives its name from the fact that it was first noticed near Norway, Me., and not from the European country, as neither this nor the white pine are native of Europe."

Make This Test.
How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased.
Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is a healthy condition or not. 98 per cent. of the people need a hair tonic.
Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.
We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall's "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.
It is because of what Rexall's "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, F. P. Stone, Main Street, Norway.

A Deserter's Village.
Among some of Maine's "Deserter Villages" in the old settlement at Hanover, near the little pond on the plateau where now the trees are so dense that nearly every trace of the old settlement of settlers is gone, there was at one time a settlement of some 40 families and a schoolhouse with some 60 scholars. Strangest of all is the fact that the present settlement in the valley below is an extension of the old one. The plateau settlement of pre-Civil War days. The inhabitants of the plateau simply died out or moved away and no one came in to fill their places, new settlers moving in on the valley farms. Today a few better houses and the little pond—said to be one of the most picturesque spots in Maine.

A Trip in the West.

Hurley, South Dakota, April 6th 1911.

Editor ADVERTISER:—For more than a month we have heard the quack, quack, quack and the bark of the wild ducks and geese, and for a long while the sweet song of the meadow lark, and the call of robin Redbreast, and yet spring lingers in the lap of winter, and seedling has made but little progress. I left Clarion, Ohio, on Jan. 3d, in the midst of a hard snow storm in which nearly a foot of snow fell, which added to the winters snowfall, up to that time made about five feet of snow, and winter only half gone. At Youngstown I boarded a sleeper on the B. & O. railroad and when I awoke the next morning I was out of the snow belt and saw no more snow until I had been at home a month or so.

I arrived in Chicago about 9 the next morning and was transferred through the sailing, bus streets of that great city to the depot of the C. & N. O. railroad, where after waiting about three hours I boarded one of a multitude of trains that daily leave on that great thoroughfare and started on a two hundred mile ride to the great prairie of Illinois, to Galesburg, where I arrived safely in the time, and was met at the station by my nephew, Dr. John Ballard, who took me to his home where with his wife, daughter Grace and husband, Dr. Griswold, and grandchild, Ballard, I had a delightful six days visit.

Illinois is a wonderful state in many ways. One-tenth of her area is timber, the balance prairie as level and beautiful as the finest Italy. Beginning at its northern limit, at an elevation of 1150 feet, it slopes gently to the southern limit 385 miles distant to an elevation of 350 feet above sea level, and the soil is so rich that land and crops are produced in hundreds of years without any fertilizer, shows no decrease in its yield of corn and other grains so I am told.

As I covered the same ground two years ago and made my report to the ADVERTISER at that time, I will make my story short to the friends I visited then and now. On Monday evening I attended with my friends the annual church meeting and church supper at the $100.00 Congregational church parlors, and later took the 11 p. m. train for Burlington, Iowa, where I took the cross line to Griswold and Atlantic, Wash., all day, making the trip about 50 miles. At Atlantic I visited with my old chum and cousin, Isaac Andrews, a well known farmer, and his children, who are well and prospering. Bud, Bess and Estelle are married. The first named is living in Wyoming. Bess lives in town and Estelle at home. I also called on Mrs. Mary Boreman (nee MacDaniels) who has a fine home here.

At Exira I had a pleasant visit with a half dozen of my old friends. The first that I called on was H. F. Andrews. He had lately returned from a month's hunting and trapping trip with his sons and daughter who live in the western part of Wyoming. He did not shoot any big game, but the party that he was with brought in five elk. With one of his boys he traveled through the Yellowstone Park, and they were successful in hunting, fishing for mountain trout and sight seeing, he had a splendid time and came home feeling almost as though he was a boy again.

I had a fine visit with Nathan, Will and Abbie Andrews. They have a fine fruit and market garden farm just outside the city limits. They have a fine home and own considerable valuable real estate in town which they rent to good advantage.

Another of the kindfollows whose latch string I always find out is Albert Andrews, a brother of the Hon. John Andrews of Conway. He has another brother, Fred, who lives on a farm at Southland near Sioux City, Iowa; also a sister, Mrs. Mary Brooks, who lives at Willsley Hills near Boston, Mass. Albert and his wife keep a hotel at Exira, and always extend a warm welcome to their visiting friends.

Another friend that I never fail to call upon is Mrs. Elmore Delchoit (nee MacDaniels) the daughter of the late John MacDaniels.
On January 17th, I returned to Atlantic and took the train to Council Bluffs and from there the evening train to Sioux City, where I stayed over night, and the next morning visited an old friend, the head of one of the commission firms at the stock yards. Sioux City is a fast growing city, having a population of some 50,000, this as given by the last census. The combination bridge across the Missouri river, the stock yards and packing houses, public buildings and parks are places well worth visiting.

Iowa is undoubtedly the best agricultural state in the Union. Of her 36,025 square miles of territory it is claimed that less than one per cent. is unproductive. It is one vast field of rolling prairie, and with a soil almost inexhaustible. It is bounded on the east by the Mississippi river and on the west by the Missouri and Big Sioux rivers. According to the last census Iowa has slightly decreased in population, and that is not to be wondered at for thousands of renters and small farmers have sold out their belongings and land worth from $125 to $200 per acre and gone to Canada or to the states farther west and either taken homesteads or bought cheap lands on which to make their homes. While other thousands of the wealthier farmers able to retire from the farm and hard labor have either sold or rented their farms, and instead of moving to town as they used to do, now go out on the Pacific coast or to Florida and buy a winter home and sometimes an orange orchard. At the annual Iowa picnic held at Los Angeles last winter, it was claimed that from 20 to 30,000 Iowans were present, and it was estimated that there were from 50 to 75,000 Iowa people living in Southern California alone.

On the evening of Jan. 18th I took the evening train to Hurley, where I arrived safe and sound three hours later, having been about fifteen days on the road and traveled about two thousand miles. Since then I have been at home in my "den" on the old homestead farm most of the time, except for a short trip of about 500 miles which I took to visit friends west of here, on which I was gone about two weeks, and of which I shall write in my next.

Quaker RANGES

Quaker Combination
Coal and Gas Ranges

Here is the ideal range for all the year around. Cook with coal, or cook with gas, or use both coal and gas at the same time.

This Cabinet Range takes up no more room in your kitchen than the ordinary coal range. The gas shelf takes the place of the usual top end shelf, while the gas oven and gas broiler replaces the usual elevated warming closet. Quaker Cabinet gas and coal combinations are also made with a gas oven and broiler at the side.

You are actually buying two ranges combined in the space of one, and you can bake equally well with the coal or gas oven.

There are many original features in this Quaker Cabinet Range.
The one piece damper—the arrangement whereby ashes may be dropped through a chute to the cellar—the simple two piece gas burners with no holes to become clogged—the large full sized oven, and the reversible flue system which insures even heat distribution on all sides of the oven.

Blacksmith Shop Burned.
The blacksmith shop, together with its contents, were burned early Saturday morning. This shop was owned by R. S. Hayes and occupied by C. W. Howe. There was no insurance.

The wooden mill was shut down Tuesday evening, for the rest of the week. Jim Dwyer and Joe Tebbelock are busy now, papering and white-washing. George Parrott and son, Ed, attended the funeral of George Andrews in Portland, Sunday. George Smith and wife from Sabatung were here Sunday to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Andrews. Mrs. Edith Kemp wishes to announce her spring millinery opening. She invites the ladies to call and look over her trimmed and untrimmed hats and various trimmings before buying elsewhere. Mrs. Augustus Andrews passed away at her home on Main street, Friday noon. Mrs. Andrews has been an invalid for several years. The immediate cause of her death was gangrene. She leaves a husband and six children, Guy and Samuel Andrews of Harrison, Edgar of South Paris, Lewis and Eugene and Mrs. Archie Smith, reside in this town. The funeral was held at her home, and words of comfort were spoken by Retha A. Glover, pastor of the Advent church.

How to Pour Tea.

Girls Should Learn to Make Tea and Serve It.

The girl who has the happy faculty of pouring tea gracefully is sure to be much in demand.

Pouring tea is a charming function when properly done. A girl who lazily declined to acquire this simple art was forced by circumstances to preside unexpectedly at a tea table. The kettle refused to boil, cups sagged gaily away from their saucers, lemon slices of lemon hugged each other so frantically that it was impossible to separate them and she was covered with perspiration. Now she advocates the idea that every girl should be taught to pour tea properly.

Here are a few rules:
First, the kettle lamp should have sufficient alcohol; then the maid should bring hot water in the kettle so that it will only take a few minutes to boil. Lemon slices should be successfully separated when cut and not have a bit of skin that is next to hold them together. All seeds should be extracted. The little lemon fork should always rest upon the small tray.

If a teaball is used then it should be filled before.
If, however, one has to take tea from the coffee, then pour from that into the teacup. A silver or china waste bowl is an absolute necessity for the tea table, and a glass fire screen is the greatest help. To keep cups from sliding about, put a drop or two of hot water in the saucer.

If a teaball is used it should rest for a few minutes in the cup with the boiling water poured over it. Then it is lifted three times and the cup of tea is brewed. This is a slow method.
A better way is to make it in the teapot. Soak the pot first, then put in your tea, generally three teaspoonsful to two cups of boiling water, and let it stand for a few minutes. Strain and serve immediately. Serve with either cream and sugar or lemon.

One can avoid the second steeping of leaves with the addition of a few fresh leaves. Tea should always be infused, never boiled.

Kangaroos are gradually disappearing from Australia. Now the number is only about one-tenth of what it was thirty years ago.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Smelts are appearing in the brook and afford a toothsome dinner treat.
Mrs. Flora Abbott, who had an attack of bronchitis last week, is reported as recovering.
Mrs. Herbert Whitcomb and Mrs. Cora Allen called on Elsie and Lena York on Tuesday afternoon.

Ella Ford, who some weeks ago went to the hospital in Portland, is reported to be much improved in health.
Mrs. Ida Riggs, who was quite ill for several weeks, has recovered and is assisting Mrs. Muller in dressmaking.

The several families having cases of scarlet fever are afflicted by quite painful conditions on account of the difficulty of getting capable nurses who are immune from the disease.

Mrs. Gertrude Kilgore, after nursing her son, Clifford, through a severe spell of scarlet fever, has herself been prostrated with the same disease and is seriously ill.

Mildred Adams, who has aided in the care of her sister Gladys during her sickness, is now ill of scarlet fever. Mrs. Adams now has sole care of both daughters as Gladys is recovering very slowly.

The local scribe omitted to report last week from the Grange entertainment the reading of the "Grange Journal" by the editors, Sisters Flora Abbott and Charlotte Morse. It was full of bright paragraphs and witty take-offs pertinent to local happenings.

William Kingman, who was confined to his bed a number of days from his attack of paralysis, has since improved so as to sit up and can use his left foot a little, which was most affected. He is reported to have a chance for recovery.

The Sunday Bibles service at the South village consisted of the following order:
Anthem, Hail mighty Victor.
Responsive Reading.
Hymn, The Song that angels sing.
Scripture lesson.
Prayer.
Hymn, Anthem, Abide with me.
Anthem, Victory over death.
Benediction.

At an Easter service in the vestry of the church at the Flat on Sunday evening, the church choir of the South parish assisted in the singing of hymns from the hymnal and repeated the musical program of anthems sung at the day service in the South church. Special numbers of the evening service were:

Easter song, Hail glorious morn.
Anthem, Hail glorious morn.
Accompanied. Mrs. Doris Rounds.
Bible story, Pastor E. W. Sims.
Accompanied. Charlotte Morse.

Gallows Chaps.
The chips from a gallows upon which several persons had been hanged were one of the items of medieval material medica. These were thought to be especially valuable in treating cases of obstinate ague.

The Tortoise.
The tortoise lives longer than any other known animal.
Cocoonant Trees.
Eight years are required to bring the average cocoonant tree into bearing. There are usually sixty or seventy trees to the acre, and the profits from cocoonant culture are generally good.

Jupiter.
Jupiter and Saturn in reality are still red hot, but they are steadily cooling off, as the world has done for so many millions of years. Jupiter even now has turned a cherry red from its original incandescence. It no longer shines. "It is a huge baby world," says Dr. Percival Lowell, "still in its swaddling clothes."

The Scotch Clans.
The Scotch clans are said to have arisen in the reign of Malcolm II, about 1008. There were forty-five or fifty of these clans, each with its distinctive badge and traditions.

Sugar Test.
A simple test for the purity of sugar is to burn it. If pure fire will entirely consume it; if adulterated it will leave an ash.

Ostrich Eggs.
The female ostrich lays seventy eggs a year.

Baked Potatoes.
If baked potatoes are wanted in a hurry they may be parboiled and finished in the oven. They should be put in the oven without wiping, as the steam hastens the process of cooking.

A Tea Legend.
One ancient legend says that the virtues of tea were learned by accident by a Chinese monarch, King Shen Nung, "the divine husbandman," who flourished forty centuries ago and who in boiling water over a fire made from the tea branches on which the latter still hung allowed some of the latter to fall into the pot.

The Pendulum.
It was the oscillation of a chandelier in a cathedral that suggested to Galileo the use of the pendulum, and about the year 1659 he applied it to clocks.

Danish Convicts.
Convicts in Danish prisons wear light gray uniforms made of coarse material. The blouse is ample, but the trousers come only to the knees. When half the term has been served the trousers are lengthened, and they are made longer from time to time, reaching full length at the end of the term.

Soil and Frost.
Water, says the North Dakota experiment station, being a nonconductor of heat, will prevent deep freezing of the ground. Therefore a dry soil will freeze deeper than a moist one.

Turning Rust to Good Advantage.
A Hessian lieutenant of the name of Ludwig von Slegen noticed the effect of the dew upon his gun barrel, which had become rusted from the dampness. Some time after he experimented upon the discovery and obtained what is now known as mezzotint. In the year 1643 he engraved a portrait of Princess Amelia of Hesse by its application.

The Skipper and The Skipped.

Holman Day has just published a new book, "The Skipper and The Skipped," Harper & Bros., publishers. This is a "shore log" of Cap'n Aaron Sprout. The Cap'n was obliged to leave the sea on account of the "rheumatism." In the chapter he settles down to run a toll bridge in the next chapter he gets married. He is somewhat of a leader and boss of men, having taken lessons as the skipper of the "Jefferson P. Bang." He had been master for twenty-four years, and was going on to fifty-six. His wife's brother, Kun' Gideon Ward, had bossed everything in the town of Smyrna, including his sister and her property. Cap'n Sprout became acquainted with Gideon by his running his toll on the toll bridge. The Kap'n's reign ended in short meter by the Cap'n marrying his sister and taking charge of her property and bossing things generally.

The story is told in good strong sea language and is moving and covering a wide range of Smyrna affairs. The Cap'n had offices and honors thrust upon him because he could manage things. He took Gideon Ward in hand and married him off in short order to his sister, whom he liked, whom he liked, who was courting for fifteen years. He was made foreman of the Smyrna Ancient and Honorable Firemen's Association.

This Association was over a hundred years old, and the hand of Hecate, fifty-two years old. They never had any fires in Smyrna, but the "Ancient" took the leading rank in all social events, dances, banquets, etc. According to the rules of the Association the foreman had the right of hanging in his front hall for instant use one of a fire or parade, a battered leather hat with a broad apron, or scoop, behind, to protect the back. On a faded little shield above the visor was the word "Foreman." There were two equally battered leather buckets; there was a dented speaking trumpet, a bed wrench to take apart crooked beds, so as to get them out of houses on fire, and a big bag with a pucker on the side, and a put to put out fires and a hand saw. He soon had a fire, and decked himself out as foreman, and started. The horse that he pressed into service ran away, and Holman Day tells of the runaways in graphic language. The Cap'n never got out of the fire, and was fined $10 and resigned as foreman.

The Cap'n was next elected first selectman of Smyrna, and he ran town affairs with an iron hand. There was but one thing the Cap'n was afraid of, just that about the law. Just about the law. Among the many stirring things he took hand in was a cock fight; the Smyrna Agricultural Fair and Gents' Driving club; Fourth of July celebration at Newry, the county-shire town, when the Smyrna men and the Newry men outskirted the "Vienny" Fire Company. This is a faithful pen picture of the old time fire masters.

Cap'n Sprout, as first selectman of Smyrna, and the first selectman of Vienna, built a road in the Smyrna section to two miles and to avoid obstructions that would entail extra expense on the towns, the two pieces of highway came to the town line with at least a dozen rods between the two ends, and to judge from the language that the two town officers exchanged across the granite post at the line, the roads would stay separated. "I never heard deep sea cussin' before" with all the trimmings, is what one of Smyrna's supporters said of Cap'n Sprout.

Kun' Gideon Ward divided a timber lot in the upper part of Maine, a half of which the Cap'n's wife owned, with Sprout. The Cap'n had never seen the timber lot, but on investigation his half was found to be a mud hole, and Kun' Gideon's the timber. To get even, Cap'n Sprout and his friend, Hiram Look, the showman, got up a salt water expedition to dig up the treasure of Captain Kidd. They located the buried treasure by a divining rod on Cod Lead Nubble, an island in the ocean.

Kun' Gideon went along for a pleasure trip, but he became interested, and paid $15,000 for the gold brick, and Cap'n Sprout started for the bank at Portland to cash the check, but Hiram Look, who was then foreman of the Honorable Ancient, and his men, who manned the boat, wanted to take a deep sea trip, and against the wishes of Cap'n Sprout, they sailed out to sea. In the storm, after many mishaps, they were cast ashore on Cod Lead Nubble.

Kun' Gideon had found out in the meantime that the treasure hole had been salted with what resembled the top of a box, and the meeting on the island was a stormy one, but after many misadventures, Cap'n Sprout and Kun' Gideon Ward were put ashore on the Portland wharf at the same time, and they started on a run for the bank.

Kun' Gideon, being taller, could run faster, but when Kun' Gideon's length ahead, the Cap'n began to bellow with all the strength of his seaman lungs, "stop thief," and pounded on behind, retreating the cry. A policeman appeared and took the Kun' to custody. The Cap'n reached the bank, cashed the check, and got pay for his wife's timber land.

The Women's Temperance Workers attacked Cap'n Sprout as first selectman, but he conquered them, even though he got a taste of their "hot" and "cold" tavern. But when he got hold of Alon Luke of Purgatory Hollow, a section of Smyrna, he attacked a problem.

Mr. Luke had bought a cook stove of a merchant in Vienna and would not meet his payments. After many parades, his door frame so as not to permit the exit of the stove, and when approached by the replevin papers invoked the statute that provided that a man's house cannot be ripped to pieces to procure goods purchased on credit. Mr. Luke had stolen until folks did not stop to think, "stealing." They were afraid of him because he was always threatening what he would do to them. He tore the door down and took out the stove, loaded it on the merchant's cart that was waiting for it.

"You've squaded me too far. You've done it at last," Mr. Luke screamed with a hysterical irritation. "You've made a deep river out of me" and he rushed into an old unused well and came up with a cylinder in his hand and a bag on his shoulder. "Dynamite," he yelled. "I'll show you whether I'm an outlaw or not." "The dynamite was some" he had stolen and hid in the dry well. He lit the fuse, threw it under the wagon and blew up the range, and then a reign of terror began. No one dared to go near him. He demolished barns and other property, went into store and ordered groceries and other goods when he wished.

and the sun was getting high, and the next time her husband started for the village the "bust" of the dynamite would come. "I ain't got any bad feeling at all, ma'am, and here's a ten dollar bill that I will advance for the town. I reckon I'll wait till you're a widder before I take you to the pothouse." Mr. Luke came with his horse the next day to the village but he did not have the stick of dynamite in his hand, and the Cap'n, looking through one of his telescopes that he kept in the town office, saw that the bumps in Mr. Luke's bag did not have the shape of dynamite. He took him under control and sent them both to the town farm.

During the two years that Cap'n Sprout had been first selectman he had saved money enough for the town to pay off the town debt, but the people did not want to pay it, they wanted to loan the money and get good interest at six per cent, without having to pay tax. They concluded they would have a centennial celebration and have that money plus money at one grand stroke. The Cap'n objected to this, but it was the vote of the town at a special town meeting and he acquiesced, though all he would have to do with the affair was to pay the bills. The secretary, Phyllis Pike, the town literary man and soulful poet, run the literary program, and he was so overcome when he found that he had engaged twelve orators for the oration of the day, and agreed to pay their bills, that he ran away with the money and hid it in a hole in the wall. He left the whole affair on Cap'n Sprout's shoulders, not even reading his poem of six thousand lines on that eventful day.

After paying the money on the contracts signed by the secretary for these orators there was no money left to pay for the sports, fireworks and other things. "Them that hires fiddlers and dances all day and night must expect to pay said fiddlers," said the Cap'n, "and I reckon you will have to pass the bat for the fiddlers."

"Won't you put your name down for a little?" called the committee man.

"Once I had the rheumatism I ain't been any hand at all to dance," was the reply.

As the money was all gone the whole town wanted the captain to continue being first selectman and replenish the treasury. This he refused to do, but he called a town meeting to raise the money and gave out that he was going to resign his office. He found that many would like to have him resign because he had run affairs with such a high hand, he concluded he would not, so he went out and took a little hand in politics. "Muttiny on me, will they? We'll just see about that." The result was that they did not accept his resignation. The vote was unanimous.

"It makes a man feel pretty good to be as popular as that in his own town," said Cap'n Sprout. "When you propose to spend your last days in a town you want to stay popular. I donated out of my own pocket enough to pay up all them prizes and purses contracted for at that celebration, and then I resigned as first selectman, and I made them understand that." But this is only a small part of the book. You must read the story and find out.

"How Short Sighted We Mortals Be."

Over the mountains once graced by the beautiful hues of tall pine spruce, hemlock, etc., are seen only bare rocks and stumps of the trees of long ago. The hills, valleys and plains of the eastern and middle states have been stripped of their forests, and the streams, burned up! The lands have been plundered, exhausted, robbed! The pluries of the North are gone; those of the South will have disappeared in twenty years, and those of the great Pacific coast in fifty years, so say conservative, thoughtful men. The spongy floor of the sloping forest, which once received and held the water and fed the springs, is now bare and hard, and like a roof of a house, pitches the water into the hollows, washing the humus and best soil before it to the river, and from the river to the ocean bed.

In the myriads of streams which once graced the native forests, and in which sported and played the fish, are well remembered by the pioneers, no water flows; but they are gravel beds summer and the highways of the torrential floods in thunderstorms, to destroy of valleys, and inundate towns once considered high and dry.

With such proceedings, the exhausted land will soon fail to respond to the hand of toil; soon there will be neither fish nor game. Trees are the most noble creatures on this mundane sphere. They are absolutely "indestructible." They plunge their roots down among the inanimate materials, slowly dissolve the rocks and minerals and carry this to the factories (the leaves) where it is converted into the substance with which it builds itself. Oh wondrous benefactors!

The trees, wondrous creation! for thousands of years have made their own foliage and then, annually, returned it to the bosom of the earth to enrich its surface. We, robbers, plunderers, have not only destroyed the trees, but we have destroyed the birds which protect our trees! Their "homes," the native woodlands, have been destroyed.

There is no place for them to nest or rest. Hundreds of thousands of them, if not millions, annually freeze or starve to death. The accursed English sparrow, the cat, crow, bluejay and other foes are annihilating the songsters. And yet, on these native birds we depend almost entirely for the preservation of our trees. Even the wild bees are destroyed!

Insects are increasing so alarmingly that a single decade might bring us face to face with starvation! We have "unbalanced nature," broken her laws. "Sin is the transgression of law," and "the wages of sin is death!" We spend millions of dollars fighting the brown-tails, moths and gypsy moths and myriad of insect pests. We ask our state to pay for this petty and losing battle, till no farmer or private citizen can afford to let a tree stand near a lot in diameter at the butt.

Our forests should be protected, not by the money they represent, but for the health and the life of the nation. We have heard and heard of "protection" from the status of foreign peoples, but all wise legislation and law, have never thought of protecting our greatest earthly protector in a way that would distribute life-giving trees plentifully throughout the length and breadth of our country.

His Finish.

Junior Exhibition.

The sixth annual Junior Exhibition was held Friday evening at the Norway Opera House. The attendance was as usual large in spite of the inclemency of the weather. The seats went on sale at the Opera House the Monday night before and there was the usual rush to get seats checked.

The program opened with music by the school orchestra, which included: Marion Haskell, violin; Pearl French, cornet; Emil O. Hurns, cello, and Marjorie Barker, piano.

The Junior class was marshalled to their seats in the hall by the marshal, Francis Sweet, to the rhythm of music by the orchestra.

Rev. R. J. Bruce, pastor of the Congregational church, offered prayer, invoking the Divine blessing upon the school, its work as an institution of learning, its teachers and the entire community.

The program consisted of readings and solos by members of the class and interspersed by drills. An exceptionally good program was arranged, which was carried out in fine order.

Ellen Victoria Groves read "Ray's Ride," which related the story of Lieutenant Ray's heroism at a most critical time. The army was located in the mountains and a message must be gotten beyond the other ranks. Ray was the man for the place. He mounted his steed and started down the ravine, darting first one way, then the other, to escape attack. At last the final plunge past the enemy's ranks was made and Ray had accomplished his deed.

Marie Stuart Fogg spoke on the "Dignity of Labor." There is dignity in labor; everything that is accomplished is brought about by labor. All that we have, the large buildings, the bridges, the railroads, all agricultural implements, and wearing apparel are all the products of labor. We delve into the earth and through labor our coal, gold, silver, tin and copper are procured.

Helen Lavina Dunn sang a very pretty selection entitled "The Swallows." Ethel Wentworth played the accompaniment.

"Jean Valjean and the Bishop" was read by Ava Marion Watson. This is the story of Jean Valjean, a man who seemingly through necessity stole some bread and for this and other like crimes had served 19 years as a convict in the penitentiary.

After being rejected everywhere he came to the bishop's for shelter and food. He was taken in and given food and the best room to sleep in. In the night he thought of the silver in the other room and stealthily secured it and jumped from the window. He was captured and returned to the bishop, who released him, giving him the gold candlesticks he gave him the night before, and started him on his way.

Buck, Eva Richardson, Dorothy Noble and Elva Bradbury was a very interesting feature of the program. The young ladies dressed in a brown suit with blue ribbons and ties did some fine work with the dumb bell drill. Azola Pike and Marion Haskell played the accompaniment.

Azola Pike played a very pretty selection on the piano.
"The Whistling Regiment" was spoken by Hazel Evelyn Bicknell. This was a story spoken to the tune of Annie Laurie, which was played by Az la Pike, and was the story of a young soldier in the war who was in love with Annie Laurie and through the inspiration of the song was led to enter the thickest of the fray and came out victorious. This song was a favorite of the soldiers and the strains were frequently heard along the line.

Marjorie Barker sang "Life's Lullaby" and Mrs. H. L. Horne played the accompaniment.
Frances Huntington Sweet spoke "For Dear Old Yale." The scene was at a mission station in the East where a company of 25 missionaries were located. Through some accident one of the men nearby was killed and they demanded a life from the station to atone. Lots were drawn by means of cards to see who should go and the lot fell to Mr. Morrison, the man who said he was willing to before the lot actually fell to him. At break of day the soldiers stopped at the fort and demanded the man. He unflinchingly stepped out to the soldiers who marched him to yonder hill and there in the morning sun gave his life to the cause and as the shots were heard his all familiar song "For Dear Old Yale" was wafted on the breeze.

The Indian club drill was another pretty part of the program. Seven young ladies including Marjorie Barker, Hazel Bicknell, Bernice Nash, Ora Howe, Jennie Linnell, Katherine Flint, Crystal Harriman, dressed in white with purple belts and purple arm bands, the class colors, executed the different movements of the drill in clock like motion.

Albert Cyprian Hobbs spoke on "Organize the World," and spoke of the manner in which Lafayette and Washington organized the United States and in like manner it is the privilege and duty of the Americans to organize the world.

The Music Lesson by Gladys Cameron, Ora Howe and Bernice Nash, caused no little amount of merriment. Miss Howe had been engaged to instruct Miss Cameron and Miss Nash in their singlession. She, not knowing much about music, began by asking them to sing the "Old Oaken Bucket," who in turn sang "Mary Had a Little Lamb," and enjoyed it so much herself she forgot all about the baton which waxed triumphantly through the air, not knowing but what she was hearing "The Old Oaken Bucket."

Cecil Brown read "The Lance of Kanana." Kanana and his father were imprisoned and young Kanana offered himself to any amount of untold torture if Prince Manuel would let his aged father go free. It was agreed and the Prince consented if he would go upon a certain mountain and take the lance, wave it three times over his head, speak his name, that of his father, and as the invincible army passed cast his lance and kill an Arab. The plans were made and carried out perfectly until the moment to throw the lance. He hesitated an instant and immediately thrust himself upon the lance and died, thus an Arab was killed and the aged man was set free.

The final number was a selection by the chorus entitled "The Soldier's Dream." The chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Florence Fogg, was made up of Ruth Cummings, Alma Shepard, Bernice Nash, Hazel Bicknell, Ava Watson, Marjorie Barker, Marion Gibson, Marion Haskell, Dorothy Noble, Aaron Yeaton, Philip Haskell, Theodore Foster, Donald Bartlett, Philip Young, Cecil Brown.

Those excused were Helen Bangs, Beryl Knight, Alton Whitehead and Donald Welch.

Each reader spoke plainly and distinctly and held the close attention of the audience, and each took their part in a masterly manner. The songs were finely rendered and the entire exhibition showed that a great deal of time and drill had been expended to make the event a success.

Before Allowing an Operation

Please Read These Two Letters.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before. Then after all that suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored her health.

HERE IS HER OWN STATEMENT.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement—I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise every woman who is afflicted with any female complaint to try it." Mrs. Orville Rock, R. R. No. 3, Paw Paw, Mich.

"There never was a worse case."

Rockport, Ind.—"There never was a worse case of woman's ills than mine, and I cannot begin to tell you what I suffered. For over two years I was not able to do anything. I was in bed for a month and the doctor said nothing but an operation would cure me. My father suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so to please him I took it, and I improved wonderfully, so I am able to travel, ride horseback, take long rides and feel no ill effects from it. I can only ask other suffering women to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation."—Mrs. Margaret Meredith, R. F. D. No. 3, Rockport, Ind.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Dairy Testing Association.

Waterford and Norway Dairy Testing association held their regular monthly meeting at Norway Grange Hall, Norway, April 12, with President V. E. Dunn in the chair. On account of the absence of the secretary, C. S. Hamlin, the reading of records of previous meeting was omitted, assistant secretary filling his chair.

Benjamin Tucker reported on his herd of 20 pure blood Holsteins claiming an increase of 1000 lbs. per cow second year over first year's work in association.

W. F. Young reported on his herd of 11 Jerseys saying that the average increase during the last year was 1100 lbs. per cow over the previous year. Each of the above dairymen claimed that it was the knowledge gained through being a member of the Dairy Testing Association, having a chance to see and know just what they were doing. Mr. Young also reported the work of two of his 2-year-old heifers for the period of 6 months 1st milk testing out 220 lbs. butter fat, 2d 190 lbs. butter fat; 1st testing an average of 5.8 per cent., the 2d 5.7 per cent. butter fat.

Official Tester Harry M. Look made his monthly report for March as follows: Total number of cows reported for month, 285; making a total of 32 herds; largest herd, 20; smallest, 4 cows; an average of 9 cows. Highest yield in butter fat was found in herd No. 1, which was 1.13 lbs. per cow; 2d highest yield in herd No. 9, being 1.05 lbs. per cow. Average test for association for entire month was .04516 per cent.; average cost for feed per cow per day, 17.3; highest cost single herd, 24; lowest cost, 12.

Mr. Look is a new tester in this association, having succeeded Mr. Noble Feb. 1st. The members expressed their appreciation of the good work Mr. Look is doing.

The following question caused a great deal of discussion:—Can a Dairyman afford to raise a calf on whole milk till he is 5 weeks old, when butter fat is worth 30 cts. per pound.

H. C. Black, Dairy Instructor, was present and gave talk along lines of "Feeds and Feeding," comparing home grown feeds with feeds purchased from the West. A brief discussion followed.

Croup Conquered.

Every Mother Should Read and Remember This.

In any home where a child has a tendency to croup, a bottle of HYOMEL (pronounce it High-o-mel) should be kept constantly on hand.

A sudden attack of croup with difficult breathing and extreme distress is apt to come on at any time.

The course to be pursued is plain. Send for your doctor at once, and in the meantime drop 30 drops of HYOMEL into a bowl of boiling water, and hold the child's head over it, cover with a towel or cloth, so that only the air filled with Hyomei vapor is breathed.

This method of treatment has saved many a child's life, and mothers of croupy children should see to it that HYOMEL is always on hand. Full instructions for prompt relief of croup is in each package.

A 50c bottle of HYOMEL is all you need in treating croup. This is known in all drug stores as Extra Bottle Hyomei Inhalant. Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store and druggists everywhere sell it. Breathe HYOMEL. It is guaranteed to cure catarrh, croup, sore throat, bronchitis, coughs and colds, or money back.

To break up a cold in a few minutes try this: Pour a teaspoonful of Hyomei into a bowl of boiling water, put towel over head and bowl, and breathe the soothing, healing vapor that arises. It makes your head feel clear in two minutes. It is pleasant to use. Free trial sample of HYOMEL can be obtained by writing Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Peruna Secrets You Should Know
